The aim of this module is to introduce students to representative works of contemporary French fiction, where 'contemporary' indicates a period of time no greater than fifteen years from the present day. At least two texts will be published in the 21st century. Set texts will be selected with a view to revealing emerging thematic and stylistic trends in French literature, which might currently include: literature post 9/11; representations of 'the Far East' (China and Japan); new perspectives on WWII; faith(s) today; influence of the visual (e.g. film) on the written text.

This module explores critical theories relating to écriture de soi as well as a variety of recent autobiographical and autofictional practices, reflecting significant trends in twentieth- and twenty-first century French literature. Texts included in the corpus will prompt discussions on childhood, memory, (life)-writing, language, education and identity. Students will be encouraged to adopt a comparative approach in order to reveal the interdisciplinary nature of life-writing, the use of photography, fiction and imagination in autobiography and autofiction, and to conceptualise potential links between genre and gender.

Du Roullet’s libretto for Gluck’s opera, Iphigénie en Aulide (1774), is based on Racine’s tragedy, Iphigénie, written exactly 100 years earlier. Students will translate the libretto from (eighteenth-century) French to (gently modernised) English. Key methodological decisions will be taken by the group at the beginning of the semester, and students will be encouraged to draw on weekly group discussions when making decisions about their own version of the translation. The results will be collective at their core but varied at the level of detail. At the end of the module there will be a sung recital featuring our translations. Musical expertise is welcome but not essential.

The sixteenth century is a time of invention and discovery: it is a time of broadening horizons, both literally - following Columbus’s discovery of the New World - and metaphorically, as the wide-scale dissemination of knowledge becomes possible through the new medium of print. Yet it is also a time of instability and conflict, marked by the "invention" of gunpowder and by the growing schism between Catholics and Protestants, culminating in the horrors of the French religious wars.

This module introduces students to a range of French Renaissance writers - from the seminal to the quirky - and examines how they respond to these shifting perspectives, which offer exciting intellectual and imaginative possibilities while casting serious doubt on ancient sources of knowledge and belief. The radical shift in literary authority that ensues encapsulates the humanism, scepticism and questions of identity that define the Renaissance.

What does it mean to refer to the sixteenth century as the French Renaissance? How has this conception – with its connotations of classical revival, of intellectual expansion and of individual identity – come about? How – and why – has this peculiarly privileged era been represented and reflected in literature and film over the ensuing centuries? And are such representations a fair reflection of this culturally rich but socially devastating period in France’s history?

This module seeks to answer some of these questions by comparing the cultural history of sixteenth-century France with its representation in historical novels and films from the seventeenth century to the present day. It allows students to compare original source material with literary representations and adaptations into film and also to reflect on what the reception history of the Renaissance might teach us as much about later periods as about sixteenth-century France itself.

Relations between the mediaeval Occident and Orient were highly complex during a period that saw violent crusades and interracial conflicts. Cases abound where notions of East and West merge and the East itself may even appear as no more than fantasy. Alongside the hideous monsters common to medieval epic, throughout the 12th-13th centuries there are many examples of fascination with the East that betray a desire to emulate its opulence as well as a fear of the foreign.

This module consequently aims to introduce students to a variety of literary representations of the mediaeval East and its residents, focussing above all on representations of cultural difference, the marvellous, and the exotic. The set texts give students the chance to engage with theoretical questions of otherness, fantasy and gender in relation to the specific historical period in question and to develop their ability to work critically with primary materials.

From a focus on religion to a study of travels through an enquiry of happiness, the thematic approach adopted in this module aims to reveal the exciting and formidably ambitious nature of the Enlightenment. The weekly seminars will offer students the opportunity to develop their expertise in the Enlightenment through close analysis of canonical texts by philosophers such as Montesquieu, Voltaire, Diderot or Rousseau. Finally, to underline the fact that the Enlightenment embraced the wide cultural reality of the 18th century, literature and philosophy will be studied alongside history, and most lectures will also consider painting and music.

What does it mean to write as a woman? What does it mean to write as a particular woman in a specific place, at a specific time? What, if anything, does the term ‘women’s writing’ actually mean, and do we still need it? This module introduces students to some of the most important approaches to French feminist theory and literary studies since the publication of Simone de Beauvoir’s Le Deuxième sexe in 1949. It then goes on to consider four novels by women writers publishing between the 1970s and the present, asking to what extent they can be read in terms of feminist theory, and how their representation of the social, cultural and artistic position of being a woman and a writer changes with the times.
