The earliest German short stories, know as Maren, were funny tales about beautiful princesses, clever wives, stupid priests, wandering body parts, crossed-dressed knights, intrigue and mayhem. Using comedy, they explore some of the most problematic aspects of mediaeval culture, such as class, gender and religion. Long disregarded as popular culture, Maren have recently emerged as one of the most fascinating areas of mediaeval fiction. This module introduces students to the genre and some of its key topics.

This module affords students the chance to study a major novel of post-war Germany, Thomas Mann’s Doktor Faustus, and through this novel to gain a larger knowledge of Mann’s work as a whole. In a series of seminars students will be guided through their reading of the work. These reading seminars will be interspersed with lectures and seminars on key themes in Mann’s oeuvre and life, from music to his political development. In addition to the main text, students will examine other genres (essays, letters) and gain broader insights into the historical situation of post-war Germany.

Grammatical rules and lexical exceptions in modern German are considered against the background of Saussurean structuralism and in relation to language teaching. Saussure said that a language is a system, and languages do indeed have rules, in their grammar. But most rules of grammar have a long list of unexplained exceptions - why? The view taken in this module is that unexplained exceptions indicate that the grammarians have got the rule wrong. We look at two rules of modern German to see how a close examination of their unexplained exceptions can point to a new and better rule: the passive and non-passivisable transitive verbs; and tense formation and strong verbs.

This module focuses on vocabulary in modern German (in contrast to GM3080, which focuses on grammar), on words and their categorisation, structure and functions. We begin by looking at the functional (as opposed to structural) approach to language, which sees language as action and effects rather than as a static grammar + lexicon. We consider three approaches to the categorization of German vocabulary, i.e. the parts of speech: categorisation by syntax, by morphology, and by semantics. Two areas of language and politics are discussed: feminist linguistics, and Nukespeak. Finally, we examine word formation in German, covering compounds, prefixes, suffixes, conversion, and morphological transparency versus opacity.

Although literary scholars declared the German-language travelogue to be a dead genre in 1989, travel writing enjoyed a remarkable resurgence in the two following decades. This revival appears to have been prompted by such factors as the radical reconfiguration of real (and imaginary) geographies in the wake of German Reunification. At the same time as this resurgence, there occurred a shift in cultural studies referred to as the "spatial turn". Theorists of culture were becoming interested in how constructing and negotiating space bears upon identity. In this module the insights of the spatial turn are applied to the reading of the newest German-language travel writing.

For almost 70 years German-language culture has wrestled with the burden of responsibility for the Second World War and the Holocaust and constantly questioned the capacity of literature, film and memorials to represent both the past and the conscience of the nation. This module will explore cultural memory of the Nazi past in Germany from 1945 to the present day, situating it in its philosophical and socio-political context. Students will analyse a wide variety of texts, debates and memorials, from novels to Youtube memes, asking what Vergangenheitsbewältigung was, is and will be in the future.

GM4046 Mediaeval Things

SCOTCAT Credits: 15  SCQF Level 10  Semester: 2

Academic year: 2016/7

Planned timetable: To be arranged.

One of humanity's fundamental assumptions is that we self-determined humans are superior to inanimate objects. Mediaeval literature, however, is full of things that have powers over humans and act like them: they can speak, feel, move, have names and biographies: swords, relics, books, stones, coats and others. This module investigates the supernatural and natural powers of things in a range of texts, such as romances. We will also gain an overview of the recent 'thing theories' trying to understand the continued agency of objects from a variety of postmodern perspectives, and compare them to the mediaeval conceptions.

GM4049 Language and Ideology in the GDR and West Germany from 1949 - 1989

SCOTCAT Credits: 15  SCQF Level 10  Semester: 1

Academic year: 2017/8

Planned timetable: To be arranged.

This module examines the relationship between language and politics by comparing the language of the FRG and the GDR in the period 1949-1989. The question posed is: did the two German states use language as an ideological weapon, or were their language differences merely a reflection of their different political systems, one capitalist, the other socialist? We will analyse texts of the period, e.g. from Neues Deutschland and the West German press, and use the Leipzig Duden and the Mannheim Duden, to bring out and examine the grammatical, lexical, word-formation and textual features which were characteristic of the language of the two Germanies during the Cold War.

This module traces the unique story of Shakespeare's role in German literary and cultural life from the eighteenth to the twentieth century. Shakespeare is the external point of reference for Enlightenment debate, the iconoclastic example for irreverent "Stümmer und Dränger". Through the mature criticism and translation of the Classical-Romantic age, Shakespeare achieved national status as a symbol of the German spirit and this role was secured in 1864 with the founding of the world’s oldest Shakespeare Society – in Weimar! Students will follow this evolving reception through a range of genres, such as critical essays, plays, and German Shakespeare translations. Authors include Lessing, Goethe, Schiller, Schlegel and Fontane, among others.

Whether it is in authors like Goethe and Schiller, or works like Iphigenie, and Maria Stuart, or concepts like 'Bildung', the cultural legacy of the short period of 'Weimar Classicism in Germany and Europe is undeniable and omnipresent. This module assesses the scope of this literary achievement and what lay behind it. The focus of the module will be on the close analysis of a range dramatic and poetic texts (such as Tasso, Tell, and Hölderlin's odes) studied in their intellectual and biographical contexts. In reading the 'classics' of German literature, we will be asked, what makes a 'classic'? Why did Germany feel it had to have a classical age at the end of the eighteenth-century? And what is specific about German Classicism in the context of other European 'Classicisms'?

Although today we take the participation of women in German letters for granted, the student of earlier periods cannot fail to observe that the pantheon of German literature contains few women. Yet women played a decisive part in constituting the field of German letters, as readers, authors, translators, critics and mediators. In this module students will encounter women writing in German who fulfil several of these roles. In the course of such encounters we shall address such issues as the historical canon, the accessibility of writing by women, and the influence of gender on literary work and the market for literature.

The Middle Ages as an Other play a crucial role in our collective imagination of our modern history, identity and global politics. After an introduction to political and cultural medievalism in general, this course will focus on films set in the Middle Ages and adapting medieval texts and events, which deeply shape our knowledge of medieval history and culture. Covering topics as diverse as the crusades, Arabian Nights, papacy and courtly love, the films studied include some of the major milestones of the genre, and are investigated from the perspective of the German elements of their production and reception, and of their shared concern with fantasy, temporality, visuality/writing and individual vs. collective identity.

This module examines the history of German fiction about monsters, with a focus on three key periods in German culture: the Middle Ages, Romanticism and Expressionism. It will enable students to use monstrosity, the uncanny, the undecidable and trauma as theoretical concepts; to determine the cultural functions of monsters; to explore the tensions that they embody; and to identify and reflect on changing and recurring fears and patterns in text and film over time.

The end of the GDR also saw the closure of the East German Film studios, DEFA, threatening its films with commercial oblivion. However, since reunification the many culturally and artistically significant films made under DEFA have increasingly attracted critical attention. This module will consider a number of these films spanning four decades in order to explore the way in which they navigate the political and censorial climate of the GDR and such issues as: East German cultural identity, the politics of the ordinary, the East German realist aesthetic, gender identities and feminism, the conflict between the individual and the state and the role of the artist in the GDR. We conclude the course by considering a film produced post reunification.

In the German nineteenth-century a class of prose fictions longer than short stories and shorter than novels enjoyed more critical and popular success than any other prose genre. Critics usually referred to these texts as novellas, harking back to an illustrious European tradition, and developing elaborate theories of what the novella was -- or, more importantly, of what it should be. This module will keep an open mind on the novella, putting the long stories themselves, rather than theories about them in the spotlight. What made these texts so popular, and so hotly debated by German critics? How does length influence the ways in which stories are composed, published, read and critiqued? In the module we will read six long stories from the period 1880 - 1941, attending to the ways in which these fictions tackle the themes of modernity.

What happened in German literature between the death of Goethe and the appearance of Thomas Mann? What were the Germans doing when Flaubert and Tolstoy were writing? Often labelled inward-looking and provincial, German Realists were critical artists producing works of real beauty which reflect on the role of literature in the modern age. This module explores the aims and practices of German-speaking authors from 1845 - 1898. Students will examine theoretical writings alongside a range of representative literary texts (poetry, novels and novellas) from German and Austrian authors such as Stifter, Storm and Fontane. Students will develop their own definitions of Realism and reflect on the value of this movement for modern readers.
