Notes:
1. The School of International Relations is committed to providing feedback. In view of the number of exams to be read and assessed in very limited time, feedback is provided in this format.
2. The tick-boxes provide general indications of strengths and weaknesses and do not carry a quantitative value.
3. It may be that the standard of an exam is common throughout, resulting in a response of ‘as above’.
4. As standard practice for quality assurance, exams may be subject to internal and/or external moderation by additional academics. Any such results will be indicated here.
5. One of the most important features of a distinctive exam answer is clear evidence of intellectual value-added; that is, evidence of taking material further, and is generally a requirement for work of distinction level.
