Dear incoming undergraduate student,

Congratulations on your admission to St Andrews! Whether you are coming from near or far, on behalf of the Anthropology Society (AnthroSoc), I would like to extend a warm welcome to you.

Social Anthropology may be a very different subject to the subjects you studied in High School, and while it is highly rewarding and enjoyable, it may take some getting used to. For this reason, I highly recommend joining the Anthropology mentorship scheme. Run by our illustrious School President, Rikke, the mentorship scheme will match you with an older student who will provide you with support as you embark on your degree.

Additionally, I highly recommend you come to AnthroSoc events, as they are a great way to meet and socialise with other anthropology students from all levels of the university, as well as your lecturers! As a society, we host a range of events from storytelling to movie nights to pub quizzes, most of which are named after bad puns on famous anthropological works. The community surrounding Social Anthropology is so close-knit and passionate, and in my opinion, this is what makes studying Anthropology in St Andrews so much better than elsewhere - or other degrees! ;) If you're interested in becoming more involved in AnthroSoc, we also will be holding an Extraordinary General Meeting (you'll see a lot of these!) to elect a new committee member for the position of Treasurer, so keep a look out for the event if you're interested!

If you have any questions, concerns, ideas for puns and events, or would just like to talk to someone at St Andrews, feel free to message the society or me on Facebook or email us at the addresses below.

We are so excited to see you soon, and on behalf of the whole committee, welcome!

Sasha Corr,
President of the St Andrews Anthropology Society.

Facebook page:
https://www.facebook.com/sasha.r.corr
https://www.facebook.com/anthrosoc/

Email addresses:
arc22@st-andrews.ac.uk
anthsoc@st-andrews.ac.uk