Community Connections
Introduction by the Principal

The University of St Andrews is outward-looking, international, and global, but at the same time, small, local, and quintessentially Scottish. As an institution, we strive to enrich the lives not just of our students and staff, but those with whom it’s our privilege to share this town, and the wider community of north-east Fife.

When I took up post as Principal in 2016, I was struck by the warmth and support the University enjoys from its local community, and how our fortunes are inextricably interwoven. Since then, I have sought to build on our strong and important local links, to meet the people and volunteers who contribute so much to the life, vibrancy and cohesion of the wider St Andrews community, and to consider how we can support and celebrate those vital contributions.

This first issue of Community Connections highlights some of the groups and individuals whose work we have been fortunate to support, primarily through awards from our University Community Fund, which we set up at the outset of the Covid pandemic in 2020.

I’m delighted to say that our donors and alumni were quick to endorse the aims of the Community Fund, enabling us to make more awards than we initially thought possible. Those who have been students here in the past told us how much the town and the community were integral to their time here, and responded generously, from all over the world. St Andrews is dear to many more than those who live, work or study here.

Looking ahead, we hope to strengthen and extend our community links and support further through Fife, and it has been an inspiring experience for us to learn of the work and activity of the multitude of projects and groups who make this community as special as it is.

I hope you enjoy this first issue of Community Connections, and I look forward to meeting you in the weeks and months ahead.

About the fund

In placing Social Responsibility at the heart of its Strategic Plan (2018-2023), the University of St Andrews recognises the importance that supporting grassroots organisations and projects plays in local society. Looking to develop greater connections with local projects and increase engagement with communities, St Andrews launched the University Community Fund in April 2020.

At the time of the launch, the world had been forced to react to an unprecedented crisis – the coronavirus pandemic. The University recognised that local organisations would be key to any community’s response and recovery from the pandemic. In St Andrews and across Fife, these groups responded with a will and bravery which must be commended.

The Fund enables the University to play an active role in supporting local communities and engage with potential partners to work together to the benefit of all those living across Fife. Many of our students and staff members volunteer locally or sit on the boards of charitable organisations. Philanthropic giving of time or money is very much a part of the makeup of our society, and we were keen to foster this at the University.

One of the most important aspects of the Community Fund is the creation and expansion of sustainable relationships with the organisations and projects we financially support. We hope it creates new opportunities for both the University and the local community, extends the University’s connections with communities across Fife, and helps to build resilience within those communities.

The University Community Fund is overseen by a panel of representatives from across the institution: Vice-Principal Governance, Alastair Merrill; Director of Communications, Niall Scott; Strategic Advisor in External Relations, Stephen Gethins; Head of Campaign and Donor Relations, Heather Edie; and Lesley Caldwell, Community Engagement and Social Responsibility Officer, who also manages and administrates the fund.

Comments from members of our panel

“...has been inspirational to see so many worthwhile projects coming forward through the University Community Fund. As we emerge from the pandemic, the opportunity to support initiatives to help our communities rebuild and thrive has never been more important, and it has been a pleasure and privilege to be involved.”

Case study

Wheels to Work, Levenmouth

During the Covid pandemic, key workers played a crucial role in making sure people had food, as well as access to healthcare and education. However, with public transport often being scaled back due to a drop in demand, some key workers found it difficult to get to work.

Thanks to the innovative keyworkers bike loan scheme based at Silverburn Park in Leven, many local people were able to access employment, volunteering and education in a safe and sustainable way.

This initiative, run by Community Interest Company (CIC) Fife Employment Access Trust (FEAT), was such a success that FEAT went on to develop the ‘Wheels to Work scheme’.

Chief Executive Duncan Mitchell explained FEAT was set up to ensure support for people who may suffer a lack of employment or other opportunities due to mental ill-health and the stigma that can surround it.

He said: “Our vision is to enable and support individuals to reach their full positive mental wellbeing and a huge part of that is removing barriers to work, volunteering and education.

“We saw how successful the bike loan scheme was during the Covid-19 lockdowns and wanted to extend this. The Wheels to Work scheme was developed to offer free bike hire to anyone struggling to get to work or further education on foot or by public transport.”

Duncan added that, thanks to financial support from the University Community Fund, project organisers were able to ensure bikes were safe and well maintained.

The Community Fund is a rolling programme; any money not allocated within a round is carried over to the next round.
