“The relationship between the Fourth Estate and the processes of imperialism is established beyond doubt in Reporting the Raj... a fascinating picture of how those who ruled India from distant shores worried about coverage, spin, and news mediation...”
—Sevamishan, The Hindu

“Kaul’s account is both convincing and important. With respect to journalism history, Kaul’s ability to show relationships between domestic politics and imperial coverage, and between politicians and journalists is highly impressive.”
—Professor Mark Hampton, Journalism Studies Review

“This is a tightly argued, informed and balanced study of a vital part of Anglo-Indian history.”
—Contemporary Review

ISBN: 9789387153530 • Hardbound • 320 pages • 2018 • ₹ 995.00
Reporting the Raj
The British press and India, c.1880–1922

This highly original and lively study represents the first analysis of the dynamics of British press reporting of India and the attempts made by the British Government to manipulate press coverage as part of a strategy of imperial control. The press was an important forum for debate over India’s future and was used by groups within the political elite to advance their agendas. Yet it also provided the wider British public with the information and images from which they formed their perceptions of the subcontinent. The repercussions of press reporting were therefore considerable, being felt not only in Britain, but also within India and the wider world. For this reason British imperial administrators felt the need to integrate press management with their approach to government.

Kaul focuses on a period of critical transition in the history of the Raj, one which witnessed the impact of the First World War, major constitutional reforms, the tragedy of the Amritsar massacre, and the launching of Gandhi’s mass movement. This period was also a watershed in official media manipulation, with the Government’s previously informal and ad hoc attempts to shape press reporting being placed on a more formal basis and explicitly incorporated into official strategy. This book will be essential reading for students of the British Empire, Indian history and the British press. It also offers important insights for students of media and communications studies and the history of political communication – and indeed anyone concerned with understanding the ever-deepening relationship between politics and the mass media today.

Chandrika Kaual is Senior Lecturer in Modern History, University of St Andrews, Scotland, UK

Order form

Please arrange to send me/us _______ copy/copies of the book. I/We enclose herewith a bank draft/cheque for ₹ ___________ in favour of Viva Books Private Limited payable at New Delhi.

Name:

Address: ____________________________________________

Tel: __________________  Email: _________________________________________________________

Order form