Modules

AN5001 Themes and Methods in Ancient History
Credits: 40.0 Semester: Whole Year
Programme(s): Compulsory module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will provide an introduction to the research opportunities in Ancient History, with instruction in the skills appropriate to different areas and interests. The topics covered in the module will include both Greek and Roman historiography, economic, social, cultural and religious aspects of the Ancient World, and various modern historiographical approaches.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Weekly meetings plus tutorials as required.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment (4 research papers) = 100%

AN5002 Critical Bibliography
Credits: 40.0 Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History, and Late Roman, Byzantine and Early Mediaeval Studies, Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module will allow students to focus on a chosen area of Ancient History, to familiarise themselves with the relevant bibliography, and to develop critical skills as they assess relevant bibliographical materials.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Tutorials as required.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5003 Integrated Study Abroad (Athens)
Credits: 40.0 Semester: 2
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: Supervised study at the British School at Athens.

AN5099 Dissertation for M.Litt. Programme(s)
Credits: 60.0
Prerequisite: An average grade of at least 14 in course work.
Programme(s): Compulsory module for Ancient History M.Litt. Postgraduate Programme
Description: Student dissertations will be supervised by members of the teaching staff who will advise on the choice of subject and provide guidance throughout the research process. The completed dissertation of not more than 15,000 words must be submitted by the end of August.
Class Hour: At times to be arranged with the supervisor
Teaching: Individual Supervision
Assessment: Dissertation = 100%

AN5101 Greek and Roman Warfare
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module studies the literary, iconographic and archaeological evidence for warfare in the Greek and Roman world. Various aspects will be highlighted, in particular the social and economic implications of war for ruling elites, for urbanisation and for ancient technology. It will approach the subject from a broad chronological perspective stretching from the Archaic to the Late Roman periods, thus allowing long-term trends and developments to be followed through, such as the role and influence of mercenaries, the rise of military professionalism (with its impacts on art and literature) and the presentation of military status within societies.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5102 Men and Women in the Ancient World
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will discuss sources and methodology for the study of gender in classical antiquity. While the main emphasis will be on the Roman world, discussion of literary and legal issues relating to the position of Athens may also be covered. Topics will include the literary representation of women, law and gender, men, women and power, and gender and religion. The course structure is flexible enough to allow students to pursue their own interests, within the broad overall structure of the course.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
AN5103  Religion and Society in the Ancient Greek World

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will examine the role of religious practice and belief in Greek society, from the sixth till the fourth century BC. It will look at a variety of different cults - from inter-state cults such as Delphi and Olympia, through the level of the polis to family religion - and at a range of different themes: the relationship of religion with politics and polis-ideology, the practice of divination, the belief in the afterlife (among many others). A particular emphasis will be laid on the examination of religious change, placing the sceptical ideas of the fifth century in the context of traditional religious conceptions.

Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5104  The Origins of the Polis

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will have as its core a discussion of the debate about the development of urban settlement in the Greek world. We shall look at both the literary evidence (Homer, Hesiod, and the lyric poets, as well as the historians), and the archaeological evidence. We shall consider both attendant discussions about the development of literacy, religion, society and art, as well as considering the larger question of how the evolution of political society can be and has been studied and discussed. Finally we shall consider the wide variety of different social and political forms that emerge around the Mediterranean basin and its hinterland, and consider whether we can deduce larger models for the evolution of political society.

Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5105  The Achaemenid Persian Empire: 550 - 323 BC

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will trace the history of the Achaemenid Persian empire - from its inception (or emergence in our sources) at the time of Cyrus the Great through to its conquest by the Greco-Macedonian Alexander the Great. As well as covering the main historical events in the life of the empire and its rulers (often fraught with difficulties of interpretation) it will examine all aspects of Achaemenid History: imperial administration, foreign relations, religion, royal ideology and public art, amongst others. Use will be made of a range of sources of evidence: Persian royal inscriptions, public art, the administrative records of Persepolis, as well as Greek sources.

Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5106  Athens in the Fifth Century

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will examine the history of Athens in the fifth century BC: the development of Athens’ ‘empire’ and of her democracy, her relationship with other Greek and non-Greek powers, as well as the history of Athenian culture, trade and ideology. Use will be made of a range of different sources: amongst others, the historians Herodotus and Thucydides, Greek tragedy and comedy, public art and vase painting.

Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%
AN5107 Democratic thought at Athens and its legacy

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: The intention of this module is to try to recover the development of Greek political thought from the 6th century BC into the 4th century BC, from the radical interventions of reformers from Solon to Cleisthenes, through the developed democracy of Athens, to the wide-ranging theories of Aristotle. The focus will be on Athenian democracy but we shall consider other examples for contrast and comparison. We shall endeavour to describe and define the nature of democratic theory, and we shall consider the major texts of Thucydides, Xenophon, Plato and Aristotle. In addition to considering current debates about Athenian democracy, particularly in the context of modern American political theory, we shall evaluate the extent to which democratic Athens contributed to the modern definition of political and civic society.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5108 Early Greek Historiography

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will examine the development of history writing in Greece: from Hecataeus of Miletus and other fifth-century writers through Herodotus and Thucydides to Xenophon and the fourth century BC. It will attempt to place the development of historiography in its intellectual, literary and historical context; emphasis will be placed on historical methodology, the presentation of historical causation, and the value of historiographical sources for writing the history of events and ideas.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5109 Greeks and Barbarians

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will look at the Greek representation of foreign peoples - from Homer and the Archaic or ‘orientalising’ age through to Alexander’s conquest of the Near East and Egypt. It will look at a variety of types of evidence (historians, tragedians, archaic lyric, iconography, public art, philosophical literature) and at a range of different peoples (Scythians, Egyptians, Persians, Lydians, Indians amongst many others). It will look both at the veracity of Greek representations, and at the implications of the Greek image of foreign peoples for the understanding of Greek history and of the later history of ideas.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%
AN5110 The Development of Roman Historical Writing

Credits: 40.0
Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History, Greek and Latin Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module will consider in detail the development of Roman historiography, using the fruits of the most recent research. We will consider the nature of the evidence which Roman historians had to use, and we will discuss the reality of the allegedly different genres of Roman historiographical writing, including annalist and antiquarian. Much of the evidence will be from fragmentary Roman historians and we shall consider in detail the methodologies involved in using fragments. The module will also consider major surviving Latin historians, Sallust, Livy and Tacitus, and try to assess the impact of their different styles on the content of their work.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5111 Roman Law and Society from Cicero to Justinian

Credits: 40.0
Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This course analyses the functioning of Roman law in its social context. Students will be encouraged to explore issues such as how law was made; the relationship of law and custom; the efficacy of law; how law intersects with politics and administration; law, crime and the socially unacceptable; and law and gender. Space will also be given to permit students to explore issues of especial interest to them (e.g. slavery, trusts etc.).
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5112 The Archaeology of the City of Rome

Credits: 40.0
Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will provide an introduction to the history and archaeology of the city of Rome from her earliest foundation until the Early Mediaeval period. A wide variety of forms of evidence will be examined, including literary, epigraphic and iconographic sources, alongside the results of centuries of antiquarian studies and archaeological excavation. Among the themes pursued will be Italian urbanisation, Rome as ‘Consumer City’, Rome as centre of power, and Rome as patroness of architectural and artistic culture. Individual regions of the city will be examined in detailed topographical studies, and specific buildings will be analysed in respect of their economic functions and construction.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5113 Roman self-fashioning

Credits: 40.0
Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will use a variety of literary texts to examine ways in which Romans developed and elaborated senses of identity and selfhood: it will examine the construction of political and religious identity, aspects of the history of sexuality, of gesture and of the body, the creation of private space and time and the intersection of moralizing, philosophical and other discourses within which the self had a privileged position. An attempt will also be made to compare Roman notions of the self with those of other periods and societies.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%
AN5114  The Beginnings of Rome
Credits:  40.0  Semester:  Either
Programme(s):  Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description:  The combination of recent archaeological finds, and new approaches to the literary and historical evidence, has re-established the period from the beginning of stable urban settlement at Rome to the end of the regal period and the foundation of the Republic as a central area of current debate and thought.  This module, which will build on research in progress in both archaeological and historiographical treatments of early Rome, is intended to explore the creation of an urban political society, and to identify what we may learn about the future growth and power of the city which would come to rule the Mediterranean.
Class Hour:  To be arranged.
Teaching:  Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment:  Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5115  Society and Politics in the Late Roman Republic
Credits:  40.0  Semester:  Either
Programme(s):  Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description:  Within the last century of the late Republic, major political upheavals and dramatic social changes redrew the constitution, the nature of Roman civic life, and the relationship between Rome and the rest of the world.  Major individual figures sought, gained and lost power, and revolution and war changed the lives of tens of thousands.  This module offers an opportunity for students to trace a line through the events by focusing on particular themes of Roman Republican history, centred on a core of texts drawn from Cicero, Sallust and the valuable biographies of Plutarch, as well as the scattered and fragmentary evidence of other literary texts, epigraphy, numismatics and archaeology.
Class Hour:  To be arranged.
Teaching:  Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment:  Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5116  Cicero and the invention of Roman political thought
Credits:  40.0  Semester:  Either
Programme(s):  Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description:  The module will focus in particular on detailed study of Cicero’s On the Republic and On the Laws, with additional reference made to the full range of Cicero’s own writing on Roman politics, to his background in Greek philosophy, and to his legacy in later times.  We shall consider Cicero’s view of the development of the Roman constitution, his assertion of human rights, and his belief in a divinely sanctioned category of law, all of which were to become important and influential in later times.  We shall also look at the connection between Cicero’s view of ethics and its place within Roman political action, and compare Cicero’s views with those of leading contemporary Stoics and Epicureans.
Class Hour:  To be arranged.
Teaching:  Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment:  Continuous Assessment = 100%
AN5117 Monumental Art in Rome and the Provinces
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will examine the use of art and architecture by Roman governments to project messages to society, primarily in Rome but also throughout the Roman provinces in the 1st to 5th centuries AD. Arches, helical relief columns and other monuments bearing inscriptions and figural sculpture form a rich source of information about Roman political and military culture, and raise many questions about elite and popular message reception, the nature of ‘propaganda’ in the ancient world, and the translation/formularisation of such messages into pictorial media by artists who had their own compositional input.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5118 Britain within the Roman Empire
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will study the history and archaeology of Roman Britain from the 1st century BC to the 5th century AD. Instead of treating the British province(s) in traditional insular fashion, it will place Romano-British history and culture within a pan-imperial context and also include contacts with Iron Age Ireland. Emphasis will be laid on the direct study of primary sources, both literary and archaeological, with clear awareness of the historiographical development of Romano-British studies. Ancient and modern imperialisms and attitudes towards ‘native’ peoples have played key parts in shaping ‘Roman Britain’ as it exists in present perceptions.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5119 Roman Gaul
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module looks at Roman rule over, and life in, Gaul, an area that included all of modern France and several neighbouring regions. It will examine the archaeology of cities and rural sites, of religious life and the economy, and will examine Roman Gaul both in relation to its prehistoric background and its place in the wider empire.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5120 Identity and Power in the Roman East
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module concerns the Greeks under Roman rule, especially in the provinces where Greek culture exercised a cultural hegemony over those of other subjects of Rome. More Greek literature has survived from this period than from the fifth and fourth centuries BC and the architecture of Romano-Greek cities dwarves that of the classical period. Both will be considered as will the Greeks’ unusual position as subjects of an empire that largely deferred to their culture. Greek classicism, the role of Greeks in the running of the empire, and their relations with non-Greek populations will also be considered.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%
AN5121  Army and Society in the Roman World
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module concentrates on the interaction between Rome’s armed forces and Roman society in general. The transition between the citizen militia army of the Republic to the professional army under the emperors had profound implications for Roman military culture, but also for broader perceptions of military activities, for the whole Roman imperial economy, for technological developments, and for the study of the organisation/mobilisation of military resources in other human societies. Concepts of identity (‘warrior’, ‘soldier’, ‘citizen’ and ‘civilian’) will be explored within the Roman experience using literary and sub-literary sources, archaeological evidence and ethnographic studies.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5122  The Economy of the Roman Empire
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module considers the economic life of the Roman empire in the period c 200 BC - AD 200. Topics considered include the archaeology of production and trade, the development of major industries, the roles played by slavery, the family and the state in organising trade and the relationship between politics and the economy. The material used will include archaeology and epigraphy, papyrology and literary sources. There will also be some consideration of the fierce theoretical debates that have animated the subject for the last couple of decades.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5123  Cult and Power in the Roman Empire
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module examines the different religions that co-existed within the early Roman empire. Roman public cults, Greek and other provincial religions, Mithraism, Isaism, Judaism and Christianity will all be considered and compared in an effort to see what common ground religions shared (and competed on) and what differentiated one from another. A wide range of material will be considered, with special prominence being given to religious art.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%
AN5124  Rome and her Eastern Neighbours

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module will study Rome’s interaction with her eastern neighbours, the Parthian and Sassanid Persian empires, and the smaller satellite kingdoms (Armenia, Palmyra etc.), in the period 1st century BC to 5th century AD. Such topics as warfare, diplomacy, urbanisation, Eurasian trade and cultural ‘orientalism’ will be examined through the study of ancient literature, art and architecture. There will be an emphasis on the archaeology of the Near/Middle Eastern region and what it reveals about the cultural mosaic over which the Romans, Parthians, Sassanids and others laid claim. It will be possible, for those who wish, to explore in detail specific sites, such as Palmyra, Dura-Europos, Hatra, Babylon, Petra and Jerusalem.

Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5125  Constantine the Great and his Christian legacy

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: The subject of the module is the Christianisation of the Roman world in the fourth and early fifth centuries AD. The main focus of the first part of the module will be the reign of Constantine (AD 306-337). Further topics will include study of the pagan emperor Julian, the “conflict” between paganism and Christianity, and the social and intellectual impact of Christianity in North Africa. Opportunities will be given for detailed study of significant texts, including imperial letters and Christian historiography. Scope will be given for students to pursue individual interests within the broad overall structure of the module.

Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

AN5126  Roman and non-Roman in the West, AD 350 - 476

Credits: 40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History Postgraduate Taught Programme.
Description: This module discusses the relationship between Romans and “barbarians” in the period which led to the political dismemberment of the Western Roman Empire by the end of the fifth century. The first part is a study of the period covered by the historian Ammianus Marcellinus (353 - 378). Other topics may include ethnic groupings, such as the Goths and Huns, the role of non-Romans in Roman service, the literary construction of “barbarism” and the broad issue of the so-called “fall” of the Roman Empire. While students will be expected to over a range of topics, broadly defined, there will also be scope to pursue individual interests.

Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%
CL5099  Dissertation for M.Litt. Programme/s
Credits: 60.0
Prerequisite: An average grade of at least 14 in course work.
Programme(s): Compulsory module for Greek & Latin M.Litt. Postgraduate Programmes.
Description: Student dissertations will be supervised by members of the teaching staff who will advise on the choice of subject and provide guidance throughout the research process. The completed dissertation of not more than 15,000 words must be submitted by the end of August.
Class Hour: At times to be arranged with the supervisor
Teaching: Individual Supervision
Assessment: Dissertation = 100%

CL5301  Research Training: Bibliographical and Reference Work 1
Credits: 20.0 Semester: Either
Anti-requisite: CL5302
Programme(s): Optional module for Greek & Latin, Greek, Latin, and Late Roman, Byzantine and Early
Mediaeval Studies Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module gives students intending to do research the opportunity to do systematic work on compilation and appraisal of bibliographical data, and to familiarise themselves with various lexicographical and reference works, both printed and in electronic form. Students will compile and study a bibliography on a topic appropriate to the envisaged thesis, and write a critical bibliographical exercise. In addition to this work there will be instruction on the use of such tools as Ibycus, Thesaurus Linguae Latinae, and others appropriate to the student.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

CL5302  Research Training: bibliographical and reference work 2
Credits: 40.0 Semester: Whole Year
Anti-requisite: CL5301
Programme(s): Optional module for Greek & Latin, Greek, Latin, and Late Roman, Byzantine and Early
Mediaeval Studies Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module gives students intending to do research the opportunity to do systematic work on compilation and appraisal of bibliographical data, and to familiarise themselves with various lexicographical and reference works, both printed and in electronic form. Students will compile and study a bibliography on a topic appropriate to the envisaged thesis, and write a critical bibliographical exercise; this will be longer and more complex than for CL4301 (20 credits). In addition to this work there will be instruction on the use of such tools as Ibycus, Thesaurus Linguae Latinae, and others appropriate to the student.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%
CL5305  Research Training: Special Topic 1
Credits: 20.0  Semester: Either
Anti-requisite: CL5306
Programme(s): Optional module for Greek & Latin, Greek, Latin, and Late Roman, Byzantine and Early Mediaeval Studies Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module gives students intending to do research the opportunity to conduct an intensive reading programme on an author, genre or topic which is relevant but not central to the intended programme of research, and to develop skills in reading Greek and Latin, in critical interpretation and synthesis. The topic (typically a text or corpus of texts) will be decided in consultation with the appropriate Chairman and the supervisor.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

CL5306  Research Training: Special Topic 2
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Whole Year
Anti-requisite: CL5305
Programme(s): Optional module for Greek & Latin, Greek, Latin, and Late Roman, Byzantine and Early Mediaeval Studies Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module gives students intending to do research the opportunity to conduct an intensive reading programme on an author, genre or topic which is relevant but not central to the intended programme of research, and to develop skills in reading Greek and Latin, in critical interpretation and synthesis. The topic (typically a text or corpus of texts) will be decided in consultation with the appropriate Chairman and the supervisor.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.

CL5307  Research Training: Latin textual studies
Credits: 20.0  Semester: 2
Programme(s): Optional module for Greek & Latin, Greek, Latin, and Late Roman, Byzantine and Early Mediaeval Studies Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: To give students intending to do research in Latin the opportunity to study palaeography and textual criticism, and either Latin prose style (including where appropriate prose rhythm) or Latin verse style and metre. In appropriate cases students may choose with their supervisor and the Chairman to do combinations of metrical and stylistic studies different from the above.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 100%

GK5010  Greek Language
Credits: 40.0  Semester: Whole Year
Programme(s): Optional module for Ancient History, Greek & Latin, and Greek Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module is designed to provide both beginners and near-beginners with a thorough grounding in the grammar and syntax of ancient Greek, together with an introduction to the reading of ancient Greek texts, both prose and verse. The first semester is devoted to an intensive set of language classes, the second to a combination of set-text study with further language classes.
Class Hour: 10 am and by arrangement.
Teaching: Four classes.
Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 50%, 3 Hour Examination = 50%
GK5099  Dissertation for M.Litt. Programme/s
Credits:  60.0

GK5101  Approaches to Greek Literature
Credits:  40.0  Semester: Either
Programme(s): Optional module for Greek and Greek and Latin Postgraduate Taught Programmes.
Description: This module will study issues in contemporary critical approaches to ancient Greek literature, and will do so with special application to one or more selected Greek texts (prose and/or verse) from any period of antiquity. The topics to be covered may include: ideas/practices of authorship, persona and voice in Greek literature; questions of narrative technique, mode and style; varieties of intertextuality; the relationship between ancient texts and their social, political and cultural contexts; comparisons/contrasts between ancient and modern ideas of both literature and criticism. The course will bring together close linguistic study of Greek texts and engagement with larger concerns arising from current and recent scholarship.
Class Hour: To be arranged.
Teaching: Introductory meeting followed by fortnightly tutorials.
