The module brings together material from a range of historical approaches in order to provide an interdisciplinary module that will function as a satisfactory introduction to history and historiography for students interested in all branches of historical study. Its combination of substantive and historiographical material enables the module to be used as a free-standing guide for those humanities students who are not based in History but who wish to take an elective module in the subject.

Programme module type: Compulsory for Environmental History Postgraduate Programme.
MO5601 or MO5801 compulsory for Modern History Postgraduate Programme.
Optional for Central and East European Studies Postgraduate Programme.

Learning and teaching methods and delivery: Weekly contact: 1.5-hour weekly seminars.

Assessment pattern: Coursework = 100%

Module Co-ordinator: Dr E Hart
This core module for the MLitt in Transnational and Spatial History offers a strong foundation in the major approaches to comparative and transnational history as well as the emerging field of spatial history. This module introduces the origins of these new ways of looking at the past, as well as some of the major methodological challenges faced. The focus then shifts to consider transnational agents, networks, and new approaches to doing history between the micro and macro scales.

Programme module type:
- Compulsory for Transnational, Global and Spacial History Postgraduate Programme.
- Optional for Environmental History Postgraduate Programme

Required for: MO5152

Learning and teaching methods and delivery:
- Weekly contact: Fortnightly 2-hour seminars.

Assessment pattern:
- Coursework = 100%

Module Co-ordinator: Dr K Lawson

This core module for the MLitt in Transnational and Spatial History offers a strong foundation in the major approaches to comparative and transnational history as well as the emerging field of spatial history. This module explores a variety of understandings of spatial history, including the idea of mental maps, the study of landscapes, places of memory and spatial practices.

Programme module type:
- Compulsory for Transnational, Global and Spacial History Postgraduate Programme.
- Optional for Environmental History Postgraduate Programme

Pre-requisite(s):

This module studies environmental history over the past two centuries in an international context. It examines attitudes to nature and animals, species history (extinctions and introductions), national parks and nature reserves, the history of environmentalism and nature conservation, the history of countryside recreation and tourism, and the history of current problems such as pollution and pesticide use. It will draw on examples taken from the USA, southern Africa, Australasia and Great Britain.

Before they are members of political and religious groupings, humans are biological entities. As such, throughout history humans have had to devise complex strategies to cope with fundamental biological factors. Focusing primarily upon an Anglo-American context, this course examines the manner in which sickness and death have shaped human history - both biologically and culturally - over the past 500 years. Consideration of patients' and practitioners' expectations, and of the changing meanings of cure, treatment, and care, encourages students to appreciate changing attitudes to health, hygiene, healing and illness within the social history of medicine. Moreover, through an examination of medical practitioners, hospitals, quarantine, inoculation, imperialism, urbanisation, and industrialisation, students will gain an appreciation of the historical relationships between the environment and disease.

Programme module type: Optional for Environmental History Postgraduate Programme.

The nineteenth century was the self-proclaimed age of progress. Consequently, it was an age obsessed with time, an age obsessed with origins. And just as human experience - human perfectibility - had become historicised, so too had nature. Natural history had become the history of nature. Drawing upon the rich primary and secondary sources generated by the 'Darwin industry', this module examines progressive developmentalism and evolutionary theories in the nineteenth century. Specifically, it considers the religious, political and social implications of a belief in a constantly changing world, governed by natural laws.

MO5602 Directed Reading in Modern History

SCOTCAT Credits: 40  SCQF Level 11  Semester: 1 or 2

Planned timetable: To be arranged.

This module offers a directed reading project designed to encourage the development of skills of historical analysis through concentrated study of a topic chosen by the student. The project offers the student the opportunity to develop skills of research, analysis and presentation prior to the dissertation. As such, it will serve as a useful transition between the more structured teaching which characterises undergraduate work and the independence of postgraduate dissertations. The project will generally take the form of a bibliographical essay or primary research on a narrowly defined topic, but the guidelines are sufficiently flexible to accommodate new developments in learning and information dissemination.

Learning and teaching methods and delivery: Weekly contact: Fortnightly tutorials.

Assessment pattern: Coursework = 100%

MO5604 Key Issues in German Historiography

SCOTCAT Credits: 40  SCQF Level 11  Semester: 1 or 2

Planned timetable: To be arranged.

This module is designed to engage with some of the most hotly disputed issues in German history. By focusing on three aspects central to our understanding of the development of modern Germany, students will have an opportunity to tackle some of the most sophisticated and influential writings on German history. Through the study of these controversies students will not only gain an insight into three pivotal concepts in German history but will also be exposed to most major strands in German historiography. While the ability to read German would be an advantage, it is by no means a prerequisite for this module.

Perceptions of Central and Eastern Europe are as diverse as the ethic and cultural characteristics of the region itself, and have undergone significant transformation since the emergence of modern nationalism in the mid-nineteenth century. As the Mitteleuropa of German imperial aspirations gave way to the successor states of the Versailles settlement, then to Soviet-dominated Eastern Europe in a polarised Cold War continent, and, most recently, to the post-Communist "return to Europe", the correspondingly evolving views from the periphery, from Germany and Russian, and from within the region itself offer a rich and challenging subject for advanced historical study.

Science and technology are key elements of modernity, and, of course, they have a history. This module will introduce students to core themes in the history of science from the Scientific Revolution onwards. Students will read a mixture of primary and secondary sources, and will be challenged to think about changes over time in such issues as: the definition and cultural status of ‘science’; the status and role of its practitioners; the motivations for the pursuit of natural knowledge; the methods employed for making and communicating knowledge; and the spaces and sites of knowledge production and communication. Sessions will usually be co-taught by members of staff who bring different perspectives, cases and period-expertise to the discussion.

Programme module type: Optional for Early Modern History, Environmental History, Intellectual History and Modern History Postgraduate Programmes.

Learning and teaching methods and delivery:
Weekly contact: 2-hour seminar.
