Students are expected to find further texts to "prolong" the comparison in a meaningful way, drawing on their respective expertise in different languages, thus developing an in-depth understanding of methods and theoretical frameworks in Comparative Literature. The module will be based on three disciplines (including but not limited to Arabic, French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish). Translations of the core texts discussed in class will be available.

The module analyses the meaning of the word 'contemporary' as applied to literary texts, exploring questions such as: does 'contemporary' signify '10 years ago' or '10 months ago'? Who decides? (e.g. which institutions and market forces?); Does this differ from one European country to another? From one genre to another? A range of theories of canon-formation are assessed in terms of their viability vis-à-vis contemporary literature: can there be a truly contemporary canon? What is the role of publishing houses, retailers, literary prizes, the internet and social networking sites in constructing 'today's canon'? The module will be based on three disciplines (including but not limited to Arabic, French, German, Italian, Persian, Russian, Spanish) and will combine theory with a number of case studies.

Italians: who are they and how is that decided? A young country with a long history, the problem of Italian identity predates the formation of the Italian State and remains unresolved in the 21st century. This module investigates the issue through seminal works by Italian writers from the 13th century to the present day. The idea of Italy and Italians has been largely located in literature and culture, the study of which is fundamental for any understanding of the reality of Italy, and forms an exemplary case study in the often contested construction of a national identity.

This module introduces students to a range of skills which are essential to advanced researchers and key to many other non-academic workplaces. We will focus on analytic and critical skills (for instance writing abstracts; critically reviewing articles and research seminar presentations; producing a research poster); oral skills (presentations; asking questions in research seminars); group work (planning a conference); IT research skills. The skills sessions will be tailored to suit modern linguists and comparatists. Seminar preparation and coursework will be directly linked to individual students’ own research interests. First year PhD students are invited to audit some part of the programme, adding a valuable component of peer input to the module.

This module will focus on the relationship between Europe and the Americas (i.e. Latin and North America, including Canada). It will explore the ways in which European authors and thinkers encounter, embrace, oppose or reject American cultures, politics and values, and how American authors in turn react to European influences. The subject will be studied through a range of literary, filmic and theoretical approaches generated in France, Germany, Spain, Italy and Russia, as well as in Latin and North America, from the discovery of the New World to the 21st century. More particularly, this module will invite students to further their awareness and understanding of the notions of identity and power at play in the many different discourses generated in Europe about America as well as different axes or networks of dialogue between North America, Latin America and Europe.

Programme module type: Optional for Comparative Literature, Cultural Identity Studies and Crossways in Cultural Narratives Mundus Postgraduate Programmes. Optional for other MLitt students outside Modern Languages with permission of both Schools.

Learning and teaching methods and delivery: Weekly contact: 1.5 hours comprising a combination of lectures and seminars.

Generations in Russian Literature and Culture: Metaphors of kinship have proven remarkably robust in the history of pre-revolutionary Russia and the Soviet and post-Soviet states, providing means for writers to conceptualise their relationship with their literary predecessors (father/son, uncle/nephew, for example), to imagine the nation in either epic (fatherland) or lyrical (motherland) terms, and, in the Soviet period, for the political authorities to develop discourses of (filial) loyalty and betrayal. This module investigates issues in Russian culture and history through the lens of genealogy, drawing on the expertise of researchers in the Department of Russian in order to broaden and deepen students’ understanding of the Russian experience from the nineteenth century to the modern day.

Programme module type: Compulsory for Russian Studies Postgraduate Programme. Optional for Crossways in Cultural Narratives Mundus Postgraduate Programmes. Optional for other MLitt students outside Modern Languages with permission of both Schools.

Planned timetable:
- 2.00 pm - 3.00 pm Tue, 12.00 noon - 2.00 pm Thu

The module is a high-level introduction to research areas of Hispanic literature and film. The approach is through “national themes”, which may vary from year to year, traceable within Spanish and Spanish American culture. One such theme is the journey, a subject associated with some of the greatest texts in Spanish, such as Poema de Mio Cid, a story of reconquest and honour retrieval set at the start of Spain and the Castilian language; Don Quijote, a journey of self-realisation in the face of modernity; or Pedro Páramo, a pilgrimage to the personal roots of the protagonist as well as of Mexico. Relevant texts and films illustrating the given theme will be chosen in line with staff expertise.

Programme module type:
- Compulsory for Spanish and Latin American Studies Postgraduate Programme.
- Optional for Crossways in Cultural Narratives Mundus Postgraduate Programmes.
