This module explores some of the key theoretical and methodological questions which arise when texts enter into relation with one another. A range of possible relations is explored by means of a number of case studies, for instance: interdisciplinary and intermedial relations; genetic relations; intercultural adaptations; clashes. Students are expected to find further texts to ‘prolong’ the comparison in a meaningful way, drawing on their respective expertise in different languages, thus developing an in-depth understanding of methods and theoretical frameworks in Comparative Literature. The module will be based on at least three disciplines, including but not limited to Arabic, French, German, Italian, Persian, Russian, Spanish. Translations of the core texts discussed in class will be available.

The module analyses the meaning of the word 'contemporary' as applied to literary texts, exploring questions such as: does 'contemporary' signify '10 years ago' or '10 months ago'? Who decides (e.g. which institutions and market forces)? Does this differ from one European country to another? From one genre to another? Different theories of canon-formation are assessed in terms of their viability vis-à-vis contemporary literature: can there be a truly contemporary canon? Is world literature linked to canon formation? What is the role of publishing houses, retailers, literary prizes, the internet, social media and media scandals in constructing 'today's canon'? The module is based on at least three disciplines, including but not limited to Arabic, French, German, Italian, Persian, Russian, Spanish, and combines theoretical sessions with a number of case studies.

This module introduces students to a range of skills which are essential to advanced researchers and key to many other non-academic workplaces. We will focus on analytic and critical skills (for instance writing abstracts; critically reviewing articles and research seminar presentations; producing a research poster); oral skills (presentations; asking questions in research seminars); group work (planning a conference); IT research skills. The skills sessions will be tailored to suit modern linguists and comparatists. Seminar preparation and coursework will be directly linked to individual students’ own research interests. First year PhD students are invited to audit some part of the programme, adding a valuable component of peer input to the module.

It will explore the ways in which European authors and thinkers encounter, embrace, oppose or reject American cultures, politics and values, and how American authors in turn react to European influences.
