DI4821 Modern Theological Exegesis

Credits: 30.0 Semester: 2

Availability: Not available in 2006-07

Description: This module will focus on a selection of biblical books in relation to how they have inspired an exegesis which is self-consciously aware of the Church’s doctrines. For instance the Christology and Ecclesiology of Ephesians will be considered in the exegetical writings of Bucer, Lapide, Rolllock Barth, Schlier, Balthasar, Schweizer, and Schnackenburg. We shall ask: to what extend are these treatments indebted to a responsible criticism which takes the otherness and historical ‘situatedness’ of the text seriously and to what extent does this awareness, along with a ‘faithful’ reading of the text and its way of speaking contribute to a richer theological interpretation?

Class Hour: To be arranged.

<td>Description:</td>
<td>This module will explore citizenship from a practical theological perspective. It will consider a variety of contemporary theories and examples of how people in different contexts participate in the life of their community; this will include the students’ own critical reflections on their practice of citizenship. The module will engage with a range of biblical outlooks, warnings and aspirations that pertain to civic and political duties and responsibilities. Particular attention will also be given to contemporary Protestant theological perspectives such as those of Jürgen Moltmann and Stanley Hauerwas. Recent Roman Catholic documents, from Episcopal and Papal sources, will be examined. The challenges and opportunities arising within contemporary contexts of citizenship such as anti-institutionalism, falling church attendance and the growth of the internet will be examined, principally from a theological perspective that gives due weight to the relational obligations of personhood.</td>

Consideration will be given to the extent to which western interpretations of the nature of God, law and sin have led to distortive soteriological accounts – interpretations whose impact has not always been constructive either at the individual or social levels. In the light of extensive recent Biblical and theological research, we shall reconsider what theologians are warranted in affirming with respect to this fundamental doctrine which lies at the heart of the Christian faith.

Prerequisite: 11 or better in DI2004

Description: This module considers what it is to be a self or person in dialogue with issues raised by the sciences, philosophy of mind and theology. The module is divided into two parts. The first considers a) the impact of Descartes on the theological debate; b) contemporary dualist and physicalist debates with an eye to developments in neuroscience; and c) the nature of the self-relation (self-awareness, self-understanding, self-knowledge, self-governance) together with associated issues relating to moral autonomy and agency. The second part engages primarily with the contrasting theological anthropologies of Karl Rahner and Karl Barth but also with those of contemporary personalist and feminist theologians.

DI4931 Trinity, Personhood, and Participation in God

Credits: 30.0
Semester: Either

Availability: not available 2006-07

Prerequisite: DI3602

Description: One of the greatest challenges for the Christian church has been to keep its ‘thinking’ about God consistent with God’s ‘personal’ character. This module takes a look at the history of Christian spirituality to assess how different eras thought about God and the Self, and whether this thinking bore witness to God’s personal nature (and the Self’s) or obscured it. We will home in on two ‘Fathers’ of different traditions – Irenaeus (patristic/Orthodox) and Calvin (Reformed) – and examine how God’s personal, relational nature radically reshaped their own theology and existence. Whether purposively or not, these theologians offer a challenge to the Western view of the individual-in-isolation. In short, this module examines the theological underpinning for the Christian experience of wholeness, while seeking to integrate the insights of pastoral/practical and systematic theology.

Class Hour: 10.00 am Friday.

Teaching: One lecture and one seminar.

Assessment: Continuous Assessment = 60%, 3 Hour Examination = 40%
DI4932 The Problem(s) of Divine Goodness

Credits: 15.0
Semester: 2

Prerequisite: Baylor University programme.

Description: (This module is only for students from Baylor University.) That God is good is affirmed throughout the Bible and is universally accepted by "the people of the book" -- Christians, Jews and Muslims. But this traditional confession is beset by a number of interesting philosophical questions. First, can we speak of God's goodness as if God were merely another mundane object in the world? Are we constrained by the logic or grammar of human goodness? Supposing that goodness is one of God's divine properties, is it a non-moral metaphysical property or a moral property? If the former, what does it add to our understanding of God? If the latter, to what extent is God's moral goodness like human moral goodness? How do proponents of divine Goodness resolve the Euthyphro dilemma? Is God's goodness compatible with God's omnipotence or with the existence of evil? In this module, we will examine these debates with attention to discussions in both the history of philosophy, and especially contemporary analytic philosophy of religion.
