This module will study the central ideas and cultural significance of the major thinkers from the Presocratic period of Greek thought (including the Milesians, Xenophanes, Heraclitus, Parmenides, Pythagoras, Anaxagoras, Empedocles, and Democritus). Among the concepts and issues that will receive particular attention are: the cosmos as a unified object of understanding; nature as an active system of principles and creative forces; the difference between mythical and rationalistic models of the world; competing paradigms of the physical and metaphysical foundations of reality; the status of human soul/mind, of thought, and of language; the development of human societies and of religious/political/ethical values.

Programme module type: Optional for all Classical Studies Degrees, for Ancient History & Archaeology Single Honours, and for all Ancient History, Classics, Greek, and Latin (Single and Joint, but excluding Three subject) Degrees.

Pre-requisite(s): As stated in the School of Classics Undergraduate Handbook

This module examines magic and related phenomena in the Greco-Roman world. Attention will be paid both to the fascination with magic in literature and to magical beliefs and practices in real life, not just practices to which the ancient writers themselves apply the word 'magic' or similar terms, but also features of conventional religion, public and private, that some modern scholars have regarded as magical. This will require examination of the problems of defining magic, sorcery, witchcraft, and the like, and of distinguishing them from religion. Students will study - in English translation - both literary texts (from Homer to Apuleius and beyond) and documentary and archaeological evidence (including magical papyri and curse tablets).

Programme module type: Optional for all Classical Studies Degrees, for Ancient History & Archaeology Single Honours, and for all Ancient History, Classics, Greek, and Latin (Single and Joint, but excluding Three subject) Degrees.

This module will give students the opportunity to study Homer’s celebrated martial epic, the Iliad, in translation and in detail. It will consider the relevant social and cultural-historical questions which are prompted by this tale of heroic savagery and suffering: why might archaic Greeks have needed an epic like this? Why is the Homeric conception of the heroic so fraught with conflict and so obsessed with honour, memory and power? The module will also analyse and interpret the epic’s rich poetic texture and ‘oral-derived’ style (formulae, similes, type-scenes...); it will explore the character of its heroes and their relationship with divinity. For all its depictions of battle and slaughter the Iliad is a poem about language as much as action and participants will consider the complex rhetoric of heroes who fight with words as well as swords. Finally, the module will ask how and why famous artists and poets of the modern era have returned to the Iliad’s ideas and imagery.

"But what is Classics for?" This is a question that most students of the Greek and Roman worlds have surely had to face at some point in their careers. This module sets out to answer that question in terms of what purposes the Greeks and Romans have been made to serve in the modern world, from approximately the mid-nineteenth century to the present day. Topics for consideration include the role of Classical education in constructing social status; why it used to be unacceptable to mention anthropology in classical studies; what museums do to their visitors apart from showing them artefacts in glass cases; why and in what form Greek tragedy keeps coming back to the stage; the ideological baggage of blockbuster films set in Greece and Rome; and what to think about Achilles after two World Wars. If this module doesn't answer your questions about the point of studying the Greeks and Romans, it should at least give you some new ways to think about it.

This module will explore, through close reading and comparative study, what made Virgil the 'Classic of all Europe' in Augustan Rome itself and in the two thousand years following the publication of the Aeneid. Focussing on particular 'hot spots' of Virgilian appropriation - the epics of Dante and Milton, the Early modern drama of Marlow, and selected poetry and prose of the twentieth century - this module will examine not just what makes the Aeneid susceptible to such a remarkable reception-history, but also what the theory and study of 'reception' can offer to a discipline of Classics and our own understanding an criticism of the ancient world.

CL4462 Leaders and Leadership in the Ancient World

SCOTCAT Credits: 30  SCQF Level 10  Semester: 1

Academic year: 2017/8

Planned timetable: 4.00 pm - 5.00 pm Tue and Thu

This module brings ancient texts about leadership and representative examples of ancient practice(s) of leadership into dialogue with modern leadership theory and contemporary leadership practice. Pairing a wide variety of ancient and modern texts, the course explores similarities and differences between ancient and modern approaches to leadership. It offers a historical-analytical perspective on leadership as a cultural practice that varies across different social, cultural and political circumstances. Furthermore, we will discuss how and to what extent modern concepts and approaches can fruitfully inform our reading of the ancient material. Adopting a deliberately broad, diachronic approach, the module aims not only to provide a thorough understanding of key moments of the development of practices and ideas of leadership in Graeco-Roman antiquity but also to enable a historically grounded understanding of leadership theory and practice in the modern world.

Programme module type: Optional for all Classical Studies Degrees, Ancient History & Archaeology Single and joint Honours, and for all Ancient History, Classics, Greek, and Latin (Single and Joint, but excluding Three subject) Degrees.

CL4601 Art of the Roman Empire

SCOTCAT Credits: 30  SCQF Level 10  Semester: 1

Academic year: 2017/8

Planned timetable: 10.00 am - 12.00 noon Tue

This module will examine the art of Italy and the provinces of the Roman Empire between the last century BC and the fourth century AD. It will include consideration of monumental art and also private art in a variety of media such as sculpture, wall paintings and mosaics. The module will look at issues such as the employment of art by the state, at the domestic contexts of art, and the artistic treatment of themes such as myth, historical events, death and sexuality. Special attention will be given to particularly rich case studies including Pompeii, Dura-Europos and Roman Britain.

Programme module type: Optional for all Classical Studies Degrees, for Ancient History & Archaeology single and joint Honours, and for all Ancient History, Classics, Greek, and Latin (Single and Joint, but excluding Three subject) Degrees.

Greek Painted Pottery offers students the chance to study the ceramic art of Greece, and to examine modern interpretations of this material. The first four seminars provide a survey of the major styles of painted pottery in Greece, primarily in Athens, and their development from Geometric to the late red-figure period (750 - 300 BCE). This includes the history of the scholarship of Greek potter, and study of the main themes depicted in the iconography. In the second part of the module student apply this basic knowledge to explore the differing modern approaches to pottery (art historical, archaeological, structuralist), and the debates between their practitioners. Case studies of particular themes are used to demonstrate the assumptions that underlie scholars’ use of the evidence of pottery, and to suggest ways in which the images and their context can usefully comment on Greek society.

This module is designed to complement ID4002 'Communication and Teaching in Arts & Humanities', a placement module in which students gain substantial experience of a working educational environment, and of communicating aspects of the Greek and Roman world to school pupils. This module provides the opportunity for students to carry out an extended piece of work on a topic related to their work in ID4002. For example, the topic could have a pedagogical focus, exploring the place of Classics in education, or it could be a more detailed exploration of a subject related to the student's special topic in ID4002.
