Planned timetable:

Lecture 11.00 am - 12.00 noon Tue, Seminar 11.00 am - 1.00 pm Thu  (Classes held in Weeks 1-5 essay submitted in week 6) - Time to be confirmed

This module involves close study of key texts of Reformation and counter-Reformation theology, setting these in the context of historical developments and noting the development of key theological themes and language. Texts will be studied chronologically, with attention paid to their contexts in the ecclesiastical developments and conflicts of the early modern period, as well as to their formative influence on the modern world. Students will be expected to read broadly in the primary texts, with specific readings assigned for closer attention.

Pre-requisite(s): Before taking this module you must pass DI2000

Co-requisite(s): You must also take DI3704

Learning and teaching methods of delivery:

Weekly contact: 1 x 1-hour lecture and 1 x 2-hour seminar (x 5 weeks).

This module involves close study of key thinkers in the history of theological ethics, focusing on a key thinker from each of five different historical periods: Bible and early church, patristic, medieval, early modern, and twentieth century. Our goal is to understand how these thinkers relate to one another, how theological ethics relates to other aspects of theology like the study of doctrine and Scripture, and how they continue to influence thinking even today - often without our noticing their influence! The module will also provide helpful background for those students who plan to take 4000-level modules in theological ethics.

Building on the competencies learned in DI2201, students will gain familiarity with advanced grammatical concepts and syntactical relationships as they are encountered inductively through the reading of primary texts. In addition, students will learn to use and evaluate a standard reference work regarding intermediate Koine Greek grammar as they learn to analyze the primary texts by using the syntactical categories of contemporary scholarship. Finally, in order to facilitate future reading, students will increase their vocabulary by mastering every word that occurs 25 times or more in the Greek New Testament.

Pre-requisite(s): Undergraduate - before taking this module you must pass DI2201

Anti-requisite(s): You cannot take this module if you take DI4632

Learning and teaching methods of delivery:

This module introduces students to the use of Christian Scripture as a resource in constructing an ecotheology. Students will be required to analyse different hermeneutical frameworks for the use of Scripture, informed by the history of its interpretation and reception. They will be introduced to empirical studies on the current environmental crisis, and will evaluate ethical models as well as various philosophical, theological and practical responses to the current environmental crisis.

Pre-requisite(s): Before taking this module you must pass DI1003 or pass DI1012

Learning and teaching methods of delivery:

This module focuses on the major forms of monastic spirituality in Latin Christianity from the sixth through the fifteenth century. We will consider the teachings of the major monastic Rules (Benedictine, Augustinian, Celtic), and how they shaped early medieval religious life. Important expressions of monastic spirituality in the high middle ages, including monks, canons regular, hermits, and the mendicant movements will then be addressed, as well as the devotio moderna of the later middle ages. Ongoing themes will include the relationship between action and contemplation, and the place of Scripture in monastic forms of prayer. Readings will include, among others, texts by Bede, Bernard of Clairvaux, Aelred of Rievaulx, Hildegard of Bingen, Guigo II the Carthusian and Thomas a Kempis.

<td>What did Paul preach? The answer might seem obvious: he was preaching the gospel. But what exactly was 'my gospel' (Paul’s words in Rom 2:16), and should it be distinguished from other gospels (cf. Rom 16:17)? In this module we shall consider key elements of the occasion, text, and purpose of Romans, in order to address this central issue in Pauline studies. The secondary literature has recently seen old and new perspectives being challenged by apocalyptic readings, and so we will take this new approach as our framework, engaging with its many critics. Lectures will cover topics such as Paul and Judaism, Paul and his opponents, and Paul and the Messiah, engaging with history, theology, and the biblical text. The result will be a better understanding of Paul the individual, his letter to the Romans, and the gospel that Paul preached. Throughout we will be engaging primarily with the English translation of the text of Romans.</td>

This module intends to acquaint the student with a range of Hebrew Readings. Three areas of specialisation will be pursued: text criticism, exegesis, and reading and translating texts from the Old Testament, with a particular focus on the last of these. Text criticism is an advanced subject area, requiring cognate language skills and detailed work in the history of the Hebrew language. To this end, the module will familiarise students with the textual apparatus of BHS Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia and will attend to the logic of text-critical decisions deployed by the standard technical commentary series, notably The International Critical Commentary Series and the Hermenia Commentary Series.

Pre-requisite(s): Before taking this module you must pass DI1004 and pass DI2002

This module introduces the Book of Daniel, one of the most mysterious and fascinating books in the Hebrew Bible. The class will explore modern critical interpretations of the book, which seek to understand it as an apocalypse in its original historical context. We will also explore the history of the book's interpretation, from responses in the Second Temple Period and the New Testament to Jewish and Christian responses in antiquity and the Middle Ages to modern popular (mis-)interpretations. All readings will be in English.

This module explores the institution of monarchy in the ancient Near East, the various presentations of kingship in the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament and the rise of Messianism in late Second Temple Judaism. Our primarily focus will the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament, but we will also look outward to explore the figure of the ideal king as represented in texts from Egypt, Mesopotamia, Anatolia and Persia, as well as looking forward to the changes that take place in the Dead Sea Scrolls, Septuagint and the possible influences from Hellenistic culture. The module will also bring in observations and theoretical frameworks from political theology and philosophy to engage with the unique position taken in the Hebrew Bible with regard to human and divine sovereignty.

Pre-requisite(s): Before taking this module you must pass DI2001

This module examines the foundations of Christianity and Buddhism and the possibility of dialogue between these two faiths/world religions. The possibilities of dialogue between a theistic and an atheistic religion are explored through themes such as silence, meditation and service as well as through theological texts by important authors, e.g. John, the 14th Dalai Lama, Raimon Pannikar, and Shantideva. This module has practical components such as periods of meditation, the recitation of sacred texts and the listening of music and mantras.

The dissertation must consist of approximately 10,000 words of English prose on a topic agreed between the student and two appropriate members of staff (who act as supervisors). The topic does not have to relate to work covered in previous Honours modules, though it may be helpful to the student if it builds on previous work. The topic and range of sources should be chosen in consultation with the supervisors in order to determine that the student has access to sources as well as a clear plan of preparation. (Guidelines for printing and binding dissertations can be found at: http://www.st-andrews.ac.uk/printanddesign/dissertation/)

Pre-requisite(s):

The student requires a letter of agreement

Anti-requisite(s):

Cannot take more than 30 credits in other dissertation/project modules.

This module explores some of the main themes in postcolonial theology. Postcolonial theology refers to a variety of theologies that have challenged structures of thought, classification and order that have been inherited through colonial, political and theological projects from the Enlightenment. Initially triggered by Edward Said’s seminal work Orientalism (1978) postcolonial theologies have used postcolonial theory as a heuristic devise in order to challenge the dominance of a Eurocentric theology. However, postcolonial theologies have managed to bridge an initial dichotomy between Western (European, North Atlantic) and Third World theologies by a hermeneutical alliance with postcolonial discourses within European theology.

Søren Kierkegaard is one of the most exciting and influential philosophers of the last 200 years. He was also one of the most original Christian thinkers of this same period. This module will explore the key themes in his thought that bear on the task of Christian theology. In particular, we shall consider his account of what it means to become a Christian and how this process takes place. In the course of this we shall consider his analyses of human freedom and responsibility, sin and despair, faith, love, passion and the imagination as also his profound and highly pertinent insights into Christology, revelation, prayer, and hermeneutics.

This module develops a theological understanding of what it is to be a human self or person. It does so in conversation with classic texts and contemporary theories in theology, and through interdisciplinary engagement with philosophy, cognitive science, and the arts. Topics will include (for two weeks each) the imago dei; humanity and Christ; body, mind and soul; free will and moral agency; and the question of a last end.

Pre-requisite(s): Before taking this module you must pass DI2000 or pass DI2010

Additional information from Schools: This module follows the same format as the Baylor and Belmont Module (DI4550, DI4551 and DI4552). A member of staff from Colgate accompanies a group of visiting students and teaches a module here. It is only offered to Colgate students.
This module provides an overview of one of the most important recent developments in theology, namely, analytic theology. The latter borrows ideas, concepts, and ways of proceeding in theological discussion from analytic philosophy and capitalises on the field-changing developments that have taken place in Christian analytic philosophy over the last four decades. The specific topics it will consider will normally include a) God’s relationship to time in the Christian interpretation of creation and incarnation; b) the nature of the human person engaging with dualist and materialist accounts; c) the significance of the doctrine of atonement for understanding the nature and conditions of forgiveness.
