This module provides a wide-ranging introduction to the history and society of the ancient Greek world and to the sources (archaeological, epigraphical, literary) on which the study of Greek history depends. The period covered runs from the origins of the Greek city-state in the archaic period, through the heyday of Athens' empire and democracy in the fifth century, to Alexander the Great's conquest of the Persian Empire. The module examines both the political and military history of the Greek world in this period and a range of other themes: amongst them, the impact of slavery on Greek culture, the distinctive Greek construction of sexuality, religious beliefs and practices, and the nature of Greek interactions with other, non-Greek peoples. It also looks beyond the major centres (Athens, Sparta) at a range of other lesser-known cities and sites. All sources are studied in translation, and the module does not take for granted any previous study; the objective of the module is to give you both the wide background and the tools of source criticism required to pursue the study of ancient history further.

This module traces Rome's trajectory from a small settlement in Central Italy to the centre of a Mediterranean empire. Covering a period from the earliest evidence of habitation to the death of the first emperor Augustus, it puts the history of the Roman republic - often studied in isolation - in its wider Mediterranean context. The two central themes are the progressive expansion of Roman power abroad and the development and eventual collapse of republican government at home. The module combines political and military history with economic, social and cultural analysis as it explores how Roman (and Italian) society was transformed by the imperial experience. It will cover a wide range of topics including religion, slavery, poverty and the economy.

The module is grounded in the close analysis of written sources (all studied in translation) and archaeological evidence. It will give you a solid background in Roman history to Augustus and develop your skills in critical thinking and historical reasoning, preparing you for further study of ancient history.

This module explores the complex history of the Roman Empire from Augustus to Late Antiquity, an empire which, for the first and last time, united the whole Mediterranean and its diverse hinterlands. Yet Roman diplomatic and economic connections spread far beyond to Iran, India, China and sub-Saharan Africa. The history and archaeology of this period are studied through the themes of power, society, gender, cultures, soldiers, cities, economies, and religions. How did an ever-evolving imperial monarchy oversee a relatively stable, slave-owning domain? What powers of coercion and persuasion did Rome exert? How was Rome and its empire culturally transformed over the centuries? Original sources are studied in translation, and no prior study of the period is required or expected.

This module deals with the human settlement and material culture of the entire Mediterranean World throughout classical antiquity. Over its long span - that covers much of the first millennium BCE and the first millennium CE - the Mediterranean was transformed from a world of tiny peasant and tribal communities first into a world of cities. Urbanism, diasporic colonisation and the appearance of complex societies and states were followed by regional hegemonies, then empires and finally a single world empire centred on Rome. This story is the rise and fall of classical civilisation and it emerges more clearly through material culture than any other evidence.

Academic year: 2020-2021
Planned timetable: 12.00 noon

This module explores some of the most dynamic literary and artistic achievements of archaic and classical Greek culture (8th to 4th century BCE). Using a twin focus on myth and on ideas of community, the module ranges across Homeric epic, Athenian tragedy, Aristophanic comedy, and the philosophical writings of Plato, looking at a series of authors whose work has had a powerful influence over the later literary tradition right into the 20th century. We look among other things at the relationship between texts and images in the expression of cultural values; and we examine a series of major themes in Greek views of identity, morality, politics and religion. The module is meant both for students who intend to take Honours Classical Studies and for those who want a fascinating introduction to the poetry and art of the ancient Greek world. It is intended to be complemented by CL1005.

This module studies a range of literary works that were written during the lifetime of the first emperor, Augustus (late first century BCE to early first century CE), and that react in different ways to the new regime that he established. This was a time of enormous changes within Roman politics, art and society; it was also one of the most creative periods of Latin literature, with important works by authors like Virgil, Ovid, Horace and Livy which have had an enormous influence over later European culture. A central theme of the module is the development of the architecture and public art of the city of Rome during this period, and the different ways in which the city features in the literature of the time. The module is complementary to CL1004, and is meant both for students who intend to take Honours Classical Studies or Ancient History and for those who want a general survey of these aspects of Greco-Roman legacy.

Early Greece was the age of beautiful poetry and cutting-edge philosophy. The module explores the diversity of early Greek thought at the crossroads of poetry and philosophy, from the 8th to the 5th century BCE starting with Hesiod’s struggle to re-order the world of gods and humans: Hesiod’s work stands side by side with Homer’s poems as foundational works of ancient Greek epic. We then consider the exciting literary and intellectual experiments of lyric poets and philosopher poets, who saw poetry as a way of writing philosophy, exploring love and attacking enemies. Authors to be studied include Sappho, Theognis, Solon, Xenophanes and Empedocles. All texts will be studied in translation.

CL2004 Culture and Thought in the Late Roman Republic

SCOTCAT Credits: 20
SCQF level: 8
Semester: 1
Academic year: 2020-2021

Planned timetable: 9.00 am

The Late Republic (first century BCE) was a time of change and conflict in the city of Rome and the wider Roman Empire. In political terms the history of that century is dominated by the series of civil wars which led to the political dominance and assassination of Julius Caesar. The literature and art of that period in many cases reflect those tensions and problems. It was also a time of rapid development of Roman art and literature as it sought to form its own new identity through the traditions it had inherited from Greek culture. From the seething passions of Catullus' poetry, through Lucretius' philosophical poetic treatise On the Nature of Things, to the stylish rhetoric of Cicero, the module aims to set the main literary texts of that period against the broader backdrop of Roman art, culture and social life. All texts will be studied in translation.

This interdisciplinary module offers an introduction to archaeology, providing a grounding in the main concepts, methodologies, and techniques of investigating the past through material evidence and physical environments. Topics will include the identification and ways of investigating archaeological sites and materials, as well as how archaeologists and cultural heritage practitioners disseminate, preserve, and curate the past for professional and public audiences. A key component of this module will be introducing the multi-disciplinary nature of the subject; lectures and seminars will cover topics that demonstrate the application of modern scientific and digital technologies to ancient landscapes and materials; included will be uses of Geophysical Information Systems, Environmental Analyses, Ancient DNA, and the creation and management of databases. Tutorials and workshops will focus on methods and approaches, and the presentation of data and its interpretation.

Learning and teaching methods of delivery:

This module provides a systematic introduction to the Latin language, concentrating on morphology, vocabulary, and basic syntax, and will enable students to read simplified Latin texts and translate sentences from Latin into English and vice versa. It is complemented by LT1002, and will thus give access to Latin at higher levels, but it may also be taken by students whose main interests lie in other areas, such as history, foreign languages and English. It is also suitable for students who have taken some Latin previously, but not to Higher or A-Level, or who have taken Higher or A-Level Latin on reduced time.

Learning and teaching methods of delivery:
- Weekly contact: Normally 4 classes.
- Scheduled learning: 43 hours
- Guided independent study: 157 hours

Assessment pattern:
- As defined by QAA:
  - Written Examinations = 100%, Practical Examinations = 0%, Coursework = 0%
- As used by St Andrews:
  - 2-hour Written Examination = 50%, Coursework = 50% (4 class tests)

Anti-requisite(s): You cannot take this module if you take LT1003

Module coordinator: Dr J Coderch Sancho

This module builds on the work done in LT1001, and its function is to develop knowledge of Latin morphology, syntax and vocabulary and to enable students to read Latin texts. Together with LT1001 it may form a basis for Latin at higher levels, but it will also be useful to students of history, foreign languages, English and other subjects.

Pre-requisite(s): Before taking this module you must pass LT1001

Anti-requisite(s): You cannot take this module if you take LT1004

The aims of this module, like LT1004, are to enhance understanding of Latin grammar and syntax, to increase vocabulary, to give a basic understanding of style, and to develop skills in translating and interpreting literary texts. A selection of classical Latin texts are studied, and students are encouraged and assisted to practise reading independently and in extenso. There will be tutorials to support this work and to help with the translation and appreciation of these and other Latin prose and verse authors.

Pre-requisite(s): Students must have Higher or A-level Latin or equivalent

Anti-requisite(s): You cannot take this module if you take LT1001

Learning and teaching methods of delivery:

- Weekly contact: 2 - 4 classes.
- Scheduled learning: 34 hours
- Guided independent study: 166 hours

Assessment pattern:

- As defined by QAA:
  - Written Examinations = 80%, Practical Examinations = 0%, Coursework = 20%

- As used by St Andrews:
  - 2-hour Written Examination = 60%, Coursework = 40% (2 literary criticisms, 20%, 2 class tests, 20%)

Re-assessment pattern:

- 3-hour Written Examination = 100%

The aim of this module is to foster the student’s acquaintance with classical Latin and to explore both prose and verse authors. The authors chosen may vary from year to year. Particular attention is paid to the development of their ideas, literary styles, and genres. There will be lectures on the authors set, seminars to discuss broader themes within the module, and tutorials to monitor and assist progress in study of the language and interpretation of the literature.
